RE: Consultation on use patterns for anticoagulant rodenticide products

To whom it may concern

We write in response to the Australian Pesticides and Veterinary Medicines Authority (APVMA) consultation on use patterns for anticoagulant rodenticide products.

1. Organisations involved in this submission

This submission is presented on behalf of the following organisations:

Australian Fodder Industry Association (AFIA)

The Australian Fodder Industry Association (AFIA) is the peak body for the Australian fodder industry, connecting all sectors of the supply chain from seed to feed. Since AFIA was established in 1996, our network of members, sponsors and supporters has functioned to help the Australian fodder industry grow.

AFIA is a not-for-profit member-based Association with over 300 members nationally representing both the domestic and the export sectors of the Australian fodder industry. AFIA's key programs are centred on:

1. Advocacy and promotion.
2. Information and resources.
3. Events and networking.

AFIA's Vision

To support a profitable, sustainable, competitive and innovative Australian fodder industry.

AFIA's Mission

To provide leadership and vision to the Australian fodder industry, engaging with all sectors of the fodder industry value chain to deliver a favourable environment for members to do business in today and into the future.

Grain Trade Australia (GTA)

Grain Trade Australia (GTA) is a national association and is the focal point for the commercial grains industry within Australia. The role of GTA is to provide a framework across Industry to facilitate and promote the trade of grain. GTA facilitates trade and works to provide an efficient, equitable and open trading environment by providing leadership, advocacy and commercial support services to the Australian grain value chain. GTA Members are responsible for over 95% of all grain storage and freight movements made each year in Australia. Over 95% of the grain contracts executed in Australia each year refer to GTA Grain Trading Standards and/or Trade Rules.

GTA has established the Australian Grains Industry Code of Practice. All GTA Members are required to adhere to the Code of Practice. GTA Members are drawn from all sectors of the grain value chain from production to domestic end users and exporters. GTA has over 260 organisations as Members. Their businesses range from regional family businesses to large national and international trading/storage and handling companies who are involved in grain trading activities, grain storage, processing grain for human consumption and stock feed milling. A list of GTA Members is attached.

The National Working Party on Grain Protection (NWPGP)

The NWPGP:

- Is the industry body responsible for providing management and leadership to industry in the areas of post-harvest storage, chemical use, market requirements and chemical regulations.
- Is facilitated by Grain Trade Australia.
- Has members across the entire grain supply chain.
- Hosts an annual forum providing participants with the latest research and developments, in the area of post-harvest storage and hygiene, chemical usage and outturn tolerances, international and domestic market requirements, and regulations.
- Co-ordinates and provides government with industry views on chemicals in use on grain and associated products.
- For further details, refer to <http://www.graintrade.org.au/nwpgp>

Within that context, the above organisations provide the following submission in relation to the grain and hay industries on the review of the use of anticoagulant rodenticide products. No comment is made on the use of rodenticide products in other locations such as on-farm as it is assumed grower groups will provide input, however if required further advice can be provided.

2. General Requirement for the use of rodenticide products

Rodenticides are used by stakeholders all along the supply chain, both pre farm-gate and post the farm-gate. Other than on-farm, locations of use include but are not limited to:

- Storage and Handling Company storage sites
- Grain/hay processing sites
- Grain/hay exporting sites (Registered Establishments) such as container or bulk port terminal facilities

The use of rodenticide products occurs for a number of reasons and includes:

- Managing mouse plagues when numbers build up in particular regions.
 - Hence their use is generally sporadic over time.
 - When required to be used, the level of use can be very high depending on the extent of the mouse plague.
- General hygiene around storage infrastructure
 - To keep numbers at a low level as part of good hygiene;

- To maintain good house-keeping practices, for a commodity that is to be provided for human and/or animal consumption; and
- To prevent damage to infrastructure and grain/hay product.
- To meet industry requirements which stipulate a number of management practices involved in mouse/rodent control, including:
 - Codes of Practice for the management of grain/hay, which stipulate practices such as good hygiene.
 - Trading Standards for domestic and/or export product, which specify limits on live and/or dead rodents, excreta and vermin body parts such as hair. For example, a nil tolerance of these contaminants in grain.
 - Domestic and Export customer Standards that stipulate limits on a range of parameters associated with the presence of rodents as listed above, including objectionable odour.
- To meet requirements of the Department of Agriculture, Water and Environment (AWE) requirements for exported product, including:
 - To be registered as a Registered Establishment:
 - Appropriate hygiene and pest control measures are to be maintained. This includes a documented procedure outlining the location of bait stations (requiring photographs), records of monitoring and frequency of monitoring, records of vermin found and removed.
 - It is the responsibility of the occupier to maintain the establishment in a hygienic condition and have documented systems to manage hygiene, pest control and waste, and to present goods and transport units that are fit for export.
 - For export premises to be certified as a Registered Establishment, whereby all premises must have a range of rodent control measures before loading of a consignment may commence, such as
 - Flowpath free of contaminants before loading may commence; and
 - Ensuring any vermin and/or their waste cannot cross-contaminate the goods.
 - To meet quarantine requirements in the Export Control Act 2020 for all prescribed commodities in every consignment to be loaded, such as:
 - Inspection to ensure any tolerances specified in the importing country are adhered to; and
 - Ensure empty containers or bulk vessel holds do not contain contaminants, pests or residues that may infest or contaminate the goods to be loaded. This includes a nil tolerance for vermin including rodents, in any single 0.5kg sample of hay/straw or 2.25L of grain no more than 7 rodent and vermin droppings.
 - To meet importing country government quarantine requirements which may have specific limits such as hay/straw for China which has a nil tolerance for rodent and vermin droppings.

In summary, based on the range of considerations as outlined above, rodenticides are a substantial and important part of the operation of premises for the grain/hay sector operating at a range of locations along the supply chain.

It is the Respondents strong view that without ready access to rodenticides for control of live rodents, the standards as outlined for rodents and their body parts would be difficult if not impossible to meet in consignments both domestically and for export.

3. Rodenticides Used

The grain/hay industry only uses rodenticide products that are legally permitted to be used, that is, those registered by the APVMA. These include a number of first and second generation anticoagulant rodenticides as outlined in the consultation paper. Anticoagulant rodenticides are an essential part of company pest control programs.

While a number of rodenticides are available only some are frequently used:

- Around facilities, gels, pastes, liquids and larger blocks are most frequently used as they less likely to be spread by rodents, which limits the potential contamination of grains and other feed / food stuffs.
- Powders, pellets and grains are more likely to be spread by rodents, with a higher potential for contamination and are therefore not as frequently used.
- Within a storage facility, non-toxic methods such as traps are generally used.

Industry applies those rodenticides in two ways:

Internal Staff

- Internal company staff whose role is to comply with all legal and company requirements for rodenticide use.
- Staff have defined roles and are trained to comply with legal requirements and company policies on pest control. In many instances Safe Works instructions are documented on their use, including MSDS forms.
- This method is often used given the remote location of these facilities and the relative lack of suitable external pest control companies to service these locations.
- Generally, staff have a range of activities to perform and vermin control forms part of their routine activities at the facility.
- In times of large pest numbers, being on-site has the advantage of immediate action to manage vermin, including identification that vermin numbers may be building to the point where additional action may be required.

External Pest Control Companies

- External pest control companies specialising in vermin control.
- Those companies are responsible for all aspects of vermin control, including complying with label directions, laying of rodenticide, removing vermin and record keeping.
- This method is chosen for a range of reasons, including ease of use, availability of companies in immediate area and the lack of need for internal staff to be trained on all aspects of vermin control.
- This method would have limitations where vermin numbers are large requiring frequent visits. In that scenario, costs may be prohibitive and company staff may be available to visit the facility in the timeframes required to meet legal requirements outlined on the label directions.

4. Management Practices

The grain/hay industry recognises the regulatory requirements for the use of rodenticide products in Australia. This includes a range of measures as outlined by Commonwealth and State/Territory Governments such as:

- Only obtaining and using products as registered by the APVMA.
- Complying with all label directions for each product. This includes:
 - The requirement that any visible rodent carcasses are picked up and disposed of. This is written into company Safe Work Instructions.
 - The label instructions are seen to be detailed enough for the proper use of these products. There is no requirement for gloves to be worn on the product label, however Safety Data Sheets for anticoagulant rodenticides typically mention the requirement for gloves (rubber / waterproof) to be worn.
- Comply with all AWE instructions for Registered Establishments such as:
 - “Rodenticides, fumigants, fungicides, insecticides or other toxic substances must be stored in a manner that will prevent contamination of prescribed goods or anything that may come into contact with them”.

The failure of rodent control in Export Registered Establishments or in other premises that supply the domestic in the past has led to consignment rejection, involving significant financial penalties and loss of reputation. From an export viewpoint, this has resulted in:

- Re-direction of cargo.
- Suspension of exporters for a period of time, requiring to assess the preparation facilities/Registered Establishment before re-commencement of trade.
- Failure to comply with market requirements (government or commercial contractual) could ultimately lead to suspension of an export market costing hundreds of millions to the Australian economy.

The grain/hay industry and its participants face an inability to control a risk that has the potential to severely damage the industry and its reputation and will result in cost pressures that may lead to hardship and participants leaving the industry. Therefore, the grain/hay industry would not support any significant restrictions on the availability or use of rodenticide products for the stakeholders that use those products at various locations along the supply chain.

We would however welcome dialogue with the APVMA to develop additional extension material that may assist industry to adhere to legal requirements and/or improve the use of those products to better manage any workplace health and safety issues.

Thank you for your consideration of this submission.

Yours sincerely,

Gerard McMullen
